Here Ye, Here Ye, Members of the Herd

We want to touch base with everyone regarding Boogie on March 21st and the Coronavirus. We'd much rather discuss the happy benefits of a Corona with lime, but the virus can bring up all kinds of responses or emotions, and we want to be sensitive to all.

There a few requests that can help things run smoothly. If you are not feeling well, we urge you to take a break and forego the workshop. If you are uncomfortable being in a crowded space at this time we urge you to notify us. With either request, we would like to extend the full refund to March 12th.

Further, we would like to ask our Herd to be sensitive and use their loving ways in a more interesting manner. We encourage hoof bumps instead of hugging. Any kind of coughing is best done into one's arm. Sneezing and blowing one's noses is best done privately if at all possible. The sharing of food, that our Herd is known for, needs to be done smartly. Be careful of touching the whole can of peanuts for example and try to use utensils whenever possible. Washing your hands a few times or using hand sanitizer during the day would be a good idea.

Here are the some of the things being worked on this week. All printing is sent to the printer, name tags, and dinner count is confirmed on the 13th. Since these tend to be costly items, it would be helpful and kind of you to let us know by the 12th of March if you feel more comfortable to cancel. The sooner we know, the better.

We are going forward with the annual workshop as we do feel all will be just fine. But that is us and we want you to make that decision which best fits your senses.

Thanks for your understanding. The next (and almost last) update, with the schedule will be out next week.

Until then, be happy, dance, and sanitize!!,
Michele and Michael
